The Story of Snowshoes

Name: _____

Date: _____

Snowshoes have been important in Canada for hundreds of years. Aboriginal peoples used snowshoes to look for food, to hunt, to check their fur traps, and to move from place to place. They made their snowshoes from wood and animal skin. They tied the snowshoes to their feet with leather straps. Snowshoes for hunting were long and narrow. They were good for walking in fresh snow. Other snowshoes were wide and round. They packed down the snow to make a trail for sleds and dog teams.
